THE WESTERN RAILWAY.

After four years' delay, we have at last succeeded in prolonging this railway as far as Villa Luzna, opening a new section some 8 leagues in length, the whole line comprising about 17 leagues, or 35 miles English. It cannot be denied that this is a great success, and it will place one of the principal camp towns in immediate contact with the metropolis. Villa Luzna will probably increase in importance almost as much as the great railway (the first year), and we expect to see a number of English shops spring up there immediately. It will be a good rendezvous for the passenger and general traffic of the West and East.

Morano was called into existence on becoming the terminus of the railway, and has since given birth to a large farming district to fall back on, and was too near Buenos Ayres to acquire wealth by trade, commerce, and agriculture. It will now fall away to its original nobility, and the station will be a mere point of transit and progress pass by the rate of twenty miles an hour, while the localities will give birth to a new town. The Puente Mariscal and puebleria of Villa Luzna, the latter of which, and gaucha dwellings are things of the past, and civilization now carries its march and more easily engraft into the heart of the campaign.

The distance from Morano to Luzna being 17 leagues, it is interesting to be resolved to make a station midway, at the Punta Perilla, where the new town of Luzna will be situated. The distance from town to V. Luzna will be 17 leagues, and the distance from Luzna to the sea will be 17 leagues, 20, 25, 30, 35, 40, 45, 50, 55, 60, 65, 70, 75, 80, 85, 90, 95, 100, 105, 110, 115, 120, 125, 130, 135, 140, 145,
